ECHO RIVER EXPLORED

Mysterious Stream in Mammoth Cave Affected By Drouth.

NEVER SO DRY BEFORE.

Secrets of Its Bed Are Being Revealed and Its Exit May Be Discovered.

Startling discovery has just been made in Mammoth Cave, which is undisputedly the effect of the drouth which has prevailed over this section for ninety days, says the Bowl ing Green Messenger.

In some of the avenues where water from ten to fifteen feet stood it is now perfectly dry. In some places where people can walk with ease and safety the oldest guide or visitor cannot remember to have seen the places without water.

The effect is more noticeable on Echo river than any place. That famous stream which normally can only be traversed for a short distance, owing to the water and the cave being so near each other, can now be traveled for miles, and it is claimed that the echoes, grand at all times, have been intensified thousands of times by the low water.

Many of the avenues and inlets not known to have existed before have been discovered, and at the present water stage many miles of avenues and grottoes can be seen.

While the water is low an effort will be made to locate the exit of the Echo river, and this may result in some wonderful discoveries. Many local people who have visited the cave often, some as many as a dozen times, are going to the cave to see Echo river under present conditions.

This is the first time in the history of Mammoth Cave, more than a hundred years, that the water has been so low as at present, and those familiar with the cave claim that it will probably be two months until the river and other waters will rise to a normal condition.

NEW STAMP SERIES

Will Include All Denominations To $1.

Postmasters have received information from Washington that the postoffice department is preparing to issue a new series of postage stamps of new design, known as the series of 1908, and that stamp books containing the new stamps will be issued about November 16. Requisitions for postage stamps will be filled with the old design until the present supply is exhausted unless postmasters indicate that the new design is wanted.

The new designs will include 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 8, 9, 10 15 and 50 cent and $1 denominations. The one-cent stamp will bear the head of Benjamin Franklin in profile from Hudson's bust. All other denominations will bear the head of George Washington in profile. The border design will be identical, the head being an ellipse on one end with laurel leaves on either side of the ellipse. Above the head will be the "U. S. Postage," and below will be the denomination. The size and shape will be the same as the issue of 1902.

PROBABLE DISSOLUTION

Will Be Result of the Federal Court Opinion.

The decision of the United States court means the probable dissolution of the American Tobacco company. Such is the opinion of Judge George Du Relle, United States District attorney, who is familiar with the case, having watched it from its inception.

cy. The special counsel for the government is former assistant district attorney McReynolds, with whom Judge Du Relle was once associated. When the case was instituted Mr. McReynolds came to Louisville and was engaged several days taking depositions.

OTHER DEFENDANTS.

In addition to the American Tobacco company, the defendants named in the government's suit included the Imperial Tobacco Co., the British American Tobacco Co. and the United Cigar Stores company, and fifty-nine other small corporations. The suit was filed July 10, 1907, and asked specifically for the appointment of receivers for the various defendant companies.

DAMMED RIVER

To Collect Water for Baptizing Purposes.

The meeting which had been in progress at Forston Baptist church (colored) for about two weeks, closed Sunday. There were sixteen additions to the membership and the converts were baptized in Little River Sunday afternoon by Rev. J. L. Allensworth, the pastor, who conducted the series of meetings. On account of the low stage of water in the river, a dam was built across the stream in order to collect enough water for the purpose.

CALLOWAY'S PRIMARY.

Nominees and Their Majority of Votes.

Murray, Ky., Nov. 5.—The following is a list of the successful candidates in Tuesday's primary here. The figures are the majorities:

County judge, Phillips, 70; county attorney, Barnett, 418; county clerk, Falwell, 257; school superintendent, Grogan, 675; circuit clerk, Lancaster, 32; sheriff, Holland, 18; jailer, Anderson, about 170; assessor, Rogers, about 208. It is possible that Henry was elected surveyor.

Beat Night Riders.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 6.—Lewis Johnson, who raised a big crop of anti-Equity tobacco this year and defied the night riders, has warehoused it all and feels safe as well as relieved. The precautions which he took to keep the plants secure were many and expensive, including armed guards at the patch and a searchlight operated from the roof of his house.

But he gained his point, and he says that it is enough for any Kentuckian.

BARNES TO BE THE SALESMAN

Tobacco Association In Session Yesterday To Elect Officers.

MANY CANDIDATES.

Only One Contest Ended at the Hour of Going To Press.

The County Committee of the Tobacco Association met in adjourned session yesterday to elect officers. Interest centered in the race for salesman, which pays twenty-five cents per hoghead. There were three candidates, S. G. Buckner, the present incumbent, Geo. W. Barnes, of Carl, and Jas. H. Pyle.

The committee went into executive session and at noon announced that Barnes had been elected.

On the first ballot the vote stood Buckner 12, Barnes 12 and Pyle 4. When Pyle was dropped Barnes was elected by a vote of 16 to 12.

For Inspector, there were four candidates—F. M. Quarles, the incumbent, T. D. Jameson and D. C. Williams, Pembroke, and R. C. Greshaw, of this city. R. M. Woodriddle & Co., F. W. Dabney and W. D. Cooper & Company, were re-elected as storage warehousemen. There are 39 applicants for prize houses in the county. Of these 10 are in Hopkinsville, 4 in Pembroke and one each at Gracey, Kennedy, Lafayette, Newstead, Carl and Fruit Hill.

The place of book-keeper, now held by D. F. Smithson, will be filled by the Executive Committee on the recommendation of the new salesman. It pays $900 a year.

STOMACH TROUBLE

Causes Death of Mrs. Will Quisenberry.

Mrs. Mollie Quisenberry, wife of Mr. J. W. Quisenberry, died yesterday morning at her home, No. 733 North Main, after an illness of several weeks of stomach trouble. The deceased was formerly Miss Mollie Wright and was reared in the Sinking Fork neighborhood. She was a sister of Mr. Frank Wright, of this city. A husband and three children survive. She was a member of the Baptist church. The interment will take place in the family burying ground to-day.

SALES NOT LARGE

But Prices Were Up To the Schedule.

The local salesman for the Association sold 48 hogheads of tobacco last week. Prices were up to the schedule. The Society of Equity gave out no report for the week, having about closed out the stock for the last year's crop. On account of the continued dry weather there has been very little done towards handling the crop of 1908, but as soon as there is a good rainfall something will be doing along this line.

COURT ADJOURNED

After the Jury Wheel Had Been Filled.

Circuit Court adjourned Saturday and the November term opened at Murray yesterday. The new jury commissioners, James Orten, J. W. Riley and Oscar Wilson completed the work of placing in the jury wheel the names of 500 men, from which the grand and petit juries will be drawn for the next twelve months.

A special term of court will convene the third Monday in February, one week ahead of the regular term, and 18 unimportant cases were set for this special term, in order to relieve the crowded condition of the docket. The regular term will be for six weeks. There are two night rider cases on the docket. Two other parties under bonds were not indicted and they are now at liberty. It is not believed that any further prosecutions will be attempted in this county under present conditions.

AGED PHYSICIAN

Passes Away After a Long Illness.

Dr. A. A. Hendrix, a prominent physician and leading citizen of Crofton, died yesterday morning. A general breaking down of his system, on account of his advanced age, 76 years, caused his death.

Dr. Hendrix was a native of Tennessee, but came to this county about fifty years ago, since which time he had practiced his profession continuously until about eight months ago, when his health failed. He was a Mason. Eight children, three sons and five daughters, survive him.

PUBLIC UTILITIES.

City Versus Company Operation
From an Engineer's Viewpoint.

Why Men Do Better and More Efficient Work For Public Employers Than For the Public-Utility Control and Private Operation of the True Solution.

By HUBERT S. WYNKOOP, M. E.

The pendulum has swung from apathy toward public utility corporations to an intense interest in curbing them—even to the extent of taking over their functions to be administered by the municipality. During the past few years a mass of argument and testimony on this question has been contributed by publicists, conservative and otherwise, and by demagogues, ignorant and otherwise. To this I add my quota, having had thirteen years' experience as a municipal engineer in close contact with the engineers of the public utility corporations.

"Public utilities" is a delightfully satisfying term on account of its vagueness, its definition depending largely upon the state of mind of the populace. For this reason it appeals to every one, be he radical, or conservative or old, and it includes water, gas and electric works, street railways, telegraphs, telephones, ferries, push carts, markets, banks and even lotteries—according to the time and place.

Whatever may be the verdict as to the more doubtful activities, it seems to be pretty well agreed that the supplying of water, gas and electricity, street railway transportation and ferrage are public utilities and therefore require public "regulation" or "ownership."

In this all of the people stand substantially on one platform—an adequate return for franchise privileges and a good service for the price paid. But as to ways and means opinions diverge widely.

Briefly as this platform may be stated, its fulfillment requires an elaborate knowledge of social economics, engineering, finance, law and local conditions. The solution of the problem may develop along one of three lines:

I. Regulation.
II. Municipal ownership and private operation.
III. Municipal ownership and municipal operation.

I.—Regulation.

When a community is the fortunate possessor of a regulating body composed of men of good character and intelligence the problem is solved for all those who are not seeking personal aggrandizement. In Massachusetts public utility stocks have become or are becoming a safe investment.

Theoretically regulation offers the maximum of result with the minimum of disturbance of existing conditions. Under wise laws, therefore, and in the hands of able men it holds itself tight open to adverse criticism than either of the other methods.

The corporation type, are generally in favor of some kind of regulation. In the present distrust of all corporations the inflated mind gives no credence to any statement that may emanate from a corporation, although the same mind will confidently accept an identical statement if issued from the office of a regulating commission which has proved itself.

II.—Municipal Ownership and Private Operation.

Next after regulation comes the plan of serving the franchise rights by the city itself, which undertakes its own construction and runs out the right to operate. The rentals provide an adequate return for the use of the public domain, and the terms of the lease supply the desired features of regulation—a good service at a fair price.

It is claimed that this method retards development by preventing speculative construction, as the city must confine its energies to the called legitimate finance. On the other hand, it is argued, the city ought to be able to indulge in speculative construction whenever the public welfare demands it.

The rapid transit subway in New York affords a good opportunity for studying the practical working of this plan.

III.—Municipal Ownership and Municipal Operation.

There are those, however, who can not rest content with halfway measures. To these and to the politicians the idea of municipal operation is an appealing one. They point to the successful conduct of waterworks by the city and argue therefrom that a municipal street railway, for instance, would be just as successful. Perhaps it would be.

But success may be attained in a variety of ways, and the best success is that gained through economy. A city might furnish the purest of water, ample in quantity and sufficient in pressure, and yet an adequately regulated corporation would probably do this very thing more successfully because at lower rates.

Admitting the payment of the prevailing rate of wages and accepting the eight hour day in both cases and assuming adequate regulation of the corporation, it would seem to be a mere matter of arithmetic to prove why the municipality should not, as a rule, undertake the operation of its own utilities.

Suppose we consider the pros and cons:

Methods embraced by law.
Methods antiquated.
Methods nondescript; to increase the importance of officials.

Appointments of head men made as rewards for political services.
Appointments and dismissals of subordinates hampered by the civil service laws and by the exigencies of politics.

Many unnecessary or inefficient men carried on the payroll for political reasons.

Appropriations granted or withheld, largely for political reasons.

In many cases 10 per cent of a day's work accepted for a day's pay.
Honesty, sobriety, loyalty, willingness, energy, courtesy and tact command no better rating than the opposite qualities—the civil service certification of competency levels all.

Corporation Operation.
Methods chosen by the head men of the corporation.
Methods kept up to date.
Methods direct; to make the minimum amount of work.

Appointments of head men made for fitness.
Appointments and dismissals of subordinates at the will of their immediate superiors, who are responsible for results.

A few unnecessary or inefficient men carried on the payroll for political reasons.

Appropriations granted or withheld in accordance with sound business reasons.

Generally 100 per cent of a day's work demanded for a day's pay.
Honesty, sobriety, loyalty, willingness, energy, courtesy and tact command corresponding rewards in the shape of increase of salary or promotion or in the shape of a reputation which will attract the attention of other and more liberal employers.

HALOS IN REAL LIFE.

French Scientist Discovers Luminous Rays Over Patients' Heads.

As a sequel to the recent discovery of M. Dumas, an eminent French savant, that the "odor of sanctity" is a scientific fact, Dr. Fere of the Bicetre hospital has just published a treatise in which he proves that the halo ordinarily attributed to saints actually exists in nature. He tends to prove that the circle of light which artists old and modern always represented about the heads of sacred personages was not a mere matter of imagination, but that it really was there and in certain circumstances could even have been photographed. He carefully points out, however, that the halo is rather indicative of certain pathological conditions than of extraordinary morality.

Dr. Fere, after long and careful investigation, discovered that cases were not rare in which halos appeared about the heads of the patients. He cites the case of a neurasthenic who during a severe attack of brain fever projected from his scalp luminous rays some ten inches in length. The lumens was clearly marked that the physician himself and the trained nurse easily distinguished it. Another patient, prey to an overwhelming emotion, suddenly had not only his head, but his hands, surrounded by a peculiar orange light. The doctor points out that this is very similar to some of the golden halos that old masters put about the heads of their saintly subjects.—Paris Cor. New York Times.

Simple Freezing Device.
A new freezing device is being exploited in Germany which is especially adapted for domestic purposes. The apparatus is quite inexpensive to make and operate. It consists merely of a double wall tin vessel with capacity of five gallons. The hollow space between the two walls is about an inch across. By the gradual admission of carbonic acid into this hollow space through an opening at the bottom and from there to the vessel proper through a cross arm tube it is claimed that water may be converted into ice in the space of sixty seconds and that meats, fruits and beverages, such as beer or wine, may be chilled or frozen in a few seconds. This effect is produced by the sudden great reduction of temperature caused by the rapid expansion of the carbonic acid, which is admitted from an ordinary carbonic acid reservoir.

The Flight of Birds.
To the average observer of the flight of birds everything is deceptive. To compare the flight of a large bird with a smaller one is especially so. The movement of the smallest seems to be a slow flier, yet he does a mile in one minute and ten seconds. The honeybee seems to travel like a bullet, yet it takes him two minutes to fly one mile. The humming bird does not fly as fast as many slow flapping birds of ungainly bulk. The quail appears to get away more rapidly than does the mallard, but he does not do it.

Liquefying Hydrogen.
Gas so dense as to sink in a liquid was a singular result of a late experiment by Dr. Kammerlingh Onnes. A mixture of hydrogen and helium in a capillary tube plunged into liquid hydrogen was compressed beyond forty-atmosphere pressures, when the hydrogen became almost entirely liquefied, and a bubble of helium was seen to descend into it. As the pressure was released the helium rose again and floated on the surface of the liquid.

Common Colds of Colds.
The fact that colds are more common in winter than in summer is not due simply to the lower temperature. It is mainly because people spend less of their time in the open air. Dreading the chilly air they remain indoors, the health is proportionately lowered and they take cold easily.

A MIGHTY ROCK CRUSHER.

Grinds Up Stone at Rate of Eight Hundred Tons an Hour.

The largest rock crusher in the world is at South Pittsburg, Tenn., where it prepares all the rock used in a cement plant which turns out 4,000 barrels of cement per day, says Popular Mechanics. It crushes an exceedingly hard and tough limestone to a six inch size and smaller at the rate of 800 tons per hour. Nearly 90 per cent of this is under four inches in size and 30 per cent under two inches.

The crusher is eighteen feet eleven inches high, and its hopper has a diameter of twenty feet. Its weight is 425,000 pounds. The top shell of the machine is made in two pieces connected by fourteen inch bolts. Each half with its concave weighs 73,000 pounds. The main shaft weighs 33,000 pounds and is thirty inches in diameter. The crushing head is seven feet high and sixty-five inches in diameter, weighing 32,000 pounds. The design of the crusher was based on an assumption of a crushing pressure near the bottom of the head of 1,500,000 pounds.

First Smoker—Yes, I tell you a clay pipe is the thing.

Second Smoker—Well, I admit there's one great advantage about a clay pipe. When you let it fall on the pavement you don't need to bother about picking the blamed thing up again.—Manchester Guardian.

Shooting at Balloons.

Experiments have recently been made in Berlin to ascertain the height at which a balloon may be considered immune from hostile rifle shots. Captive balloons were sent up, and they were shot at from angles of from 15 to 45 degrees. Balloons traveling at a height of from 600 to 2,000 yards could be hit only once out of six shots, while they were absolutely safe at a height of 3,000 yards. Even when struck, the damage to the gas bag was so small that the balloon was able to continue its journey for hours before the escaping gas made a landing necessary.—Scientific American.

CONCRETE WHARF PILES.

Simple Method of Construction Employed on Pacific Coast.

The construction of the municipal wharf at Berkeley, Cal., demonstrates that a much smaller concrete pile can be used and relied upon than has ever been accepted before. At the shore end of the approach the piles are twenty-two inches in diameter, while those beyond are two inches larger. The wharf consists of 450 concrete piles, the average amount of concrete for each pile being two cubic yards, and 840 barrels of cement were used in making the concrete. The piles are set by using a wooden cylinder, which is first driven into the ground and the earth and mud within removed by water pressure from a hose. The hose is forced into the soft material inside the cylinder, and the pressure stirs up the mud, which flows over the top. The water is then siphoned out.

The driving of the cylinder is not so difficult as would first appear. It is easily driven to hardpan, which is considered a sufficient depth. Some water is sure to remain in the bottom of the cylinder, and a small portion of dry cement is first shoveled into the bottom, followed with well tamped concrete. As the wooden cylinders are comparatively cheap, they are not removed. It is only a matter of time when the terebos will remove them, and then the concrete will first be exposed.—Popular Mechanics.

HIDDEN DANGERS.

Nature Gives Timely Warning That No Hopkinsville Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

Danger Signal No. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well kidneys excrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy, or a thick, red, ill-smelling urine, full of sediment and irregular of passage.

Danger Signal No. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy or short and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the coming of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently.

W. E. Watson, living on Washington street, Elton, Ky., says: "Kidney trouble bothered me a great deal for five or six years. I was troubled with a constant aching in my back at night and was prevented from sleeping. When I arose in the morning I would be lame and stiff, and feeling little like attending to my duties. Sharp twinges through my loins when stooping or lifting caused me additional misery, headaches and dizzy spells were of frequent occurrence, and I was subject to nervous spells. The kidney secretions were too frequent in action, especially at night when I would be forced to arise several times. At last it was my good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills, and I procured them. They relieved me at once, and the contents of one box cured me permanently. I am very thankful to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Plenty more proof like this from Hopkinsville people. Call at L. A. Johnson & Co.'s drug store and ask what their customers report.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents, Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

The Weather.

FOR KENTUCKY—Increasing cloudiness and possibly light showers Tuesday.

The trial of Ray Lamphere, the alleged murderer of Mrs. Belle Guinness, the female Bluebeard, at LaPorte, Ind., was begun yesterday.

Nat Goodwin, the actor, has married this time to Edna Goodrich. He was divorced from Maxine Elliott not long ago.

The Courier-Journal was 40 years old last Sunday and all of that time Hon. Henry Watterson has been the editor.

Herbert S. Hadley, the new Republican Governor-elect of Missouri, is the present attorney general of the state. He is only 36 years of age.

Justice John M. Harlan and wife, of the Supreme Court, will spend Thanksgiving week with Gov. Willson, at Frankfort. The Governor read law in Judge Harlan's office.

The Republicans of Montana do not yet concede the re-election of Gov. E. L. Norris, and are hoping to oust him out. He is the only Democrat who has a chance.

Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff has been selected by the Emperor of Germany to succeed the late Baron Seck von Sternburg as Ambassador to America.

In the Twelfth district primary Saturday, Chas. H. Sanford was nominated for commonwealth's attorney over Edwin H. Davis. For circuit judge, Chas. C. Marshall had no opposition.

The race for Senator in Indiana will be a hot contest in which Jno. W. Kern, Jno. E. Lamb, L. E. Stack, Henry Warrum, J. K. Risk, W. S. Ryan and B. F. Shively are expected to be starters.

The smoke-abating ordinance, which compels the use of smoke consuming appliances in factories where coal is used and much soot is carried out the smokestacks, went into effect in Louisville Saturday.

In the Eighteenth judicial district, L. P. Fryer defeated J. J. Osborne for circuit judge, in the Democratic primary. This district includes Nicholas county, in which there has been no successful inquiry into the assassination of Biram Hedges by night riders last spring.

Mr. Bryan's paper, the Commoner, says Mr. Bryan's favorite hymn is "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go." As one of the survivors of the cyclone, we believe we are right in saying that what few Democrats there are left want Mr. Bryan to go to the United States Senate from Nebraska.

In the contest for nominations in the Mt. Sterling judicial district, the races narrowed down to one for each office and the primary will be called in and Judge Allie W. Young will be renominated for circuit judge and A. B. White will be declared the nominee for commonwealth's attorney.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedy. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed, the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be restored forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by My Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

Mrs. Herman Pierce, of Pierce, Tenn., a widow of 40, went to Canada last week to wed Dr. Wm. Grouse, a man she had never seen. She took her two sons with her. The wedding was arranged by correspondence.

In four states—Indiana, Ohio, Missouri and Maryland—the elections of minor officers are still unsettled and there will be divided victories. Both sides are waiting in suspense for the completion of official counts.

In Maryland, Bryan gets six electoral votes and Taft two. One of the Taft electors got the highest vote, winning by 561 majority over the highest Bryan elector. This gives Bryan 162 votes and Taft 321.

Vice President Chas. W. Fairbanks, Senator Jaa. A. Hemenway, Congressmen Watson, Foster and eight or ten other Republican leaders of Indiana, including Gov. Hanly, will be out of politics next year, unless President Taft "takes care" of them.

The State has won the first blood in the clash with night riders in the courts at Union City. Judge Jones has sustained Gov. Patterson's interpretation of the law, and denied the writs of habeas corpus. An appeal will be taken.

The Government's contention that the American Tobacco Company is a trust operating in restraint of trade and in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, was sustained in decisions handed down by Judges LaCombe, Cox and Noyes in the United States Circuit Court at New York Saturday. Judge Ward dissented.

And so Gov. Folk, Missouri's great reform Governor, is defeated for Senator by a professional politician and his state is turned over to a Republican Governor. Reformers have a hard row to travel. The enemies they make are always resentful and their friends are too often ungrateful for benefits derived.

Charles W. Morse, until a year ago a dominant figure in the world of finance, and Alfred H. Curtis, former president of the National Bank of North America, New York, were found guilty in the United States circuit court on charges of misapplication of funds and falsifying the books of the bank, and sentenced to 15 years imprisonment.

The Courier-Journal sneers at a Christian county as one of the counties of the state afflicted with night riders. If Gov. Willson has the power and inclination to take up the settlement of the night rider evil at LaPorte, the good people of Christian county are ready to co-operate with him. They are as much ashamed of the disgraceful conditions as the rest of the state. But unfortunately an other year must pass before we can improve these conditions, without assistance similar to that Gov. Patterson is giving to the people of Ohio county.

His Guess.

A good many years ago, when John Leimbert was in the Union depot ticket office, a big, big Swede stepped up to the window. Mr. Leimbert went to wait on him.

"What will it be?" asked Mr. Leimbert.

"Ay tank Ay tank ticket son of a gun," replied the Swede.

The man inside looked at him a minute, scratched his head, reached over to the case, got a ticket, stamped it and said, "Eighty-nine-five."

The Swede paid the money and departed. Mr. Leimbert had figured it out that he wanted to go to Guinon. Whether or not he guessed right nobody ever knew, as they never saw the Swede again.—Denver Post.

New Arithmetic Anyhow.

A teacher of music in one of the public schools in the south desired to impress the pupils with the meaning of the signs "f" and "ff" in a song they were about to sing. After explaining that "ff" meant forte he said, "Now, children, if 'f' means forte, what does 'ff' mean?"

Silence reigned for a moment, and then he was astonished to hear a bright little fellow shout, "Eighty!"

"What Janitors Have to Know.

"An east side janitor in New York has to know a few things," said the east side flat dweller. "He must not only be a first rate cleaner, a plumber, a flier of keys, a putter up of curtains-blinds, I mean—a mender of tin roofs, an electrician—for the lights and the bells—a first rate stoker, but he must speak at least four languages, and speak them pretty well."—New York Press.

MUNICIPAL MESSAGE.

Public Ownership Success a Fleeting Vision.

British Municipal Traction Systems Offer No Appeal or Argument to the American Workman—Starvation Wages and Overworked Tenements Are Among the Evils Which Make Possible the So Called "Relief of the Rates."

It is a somewhat puzzling problem why certain persons in the bureau of manufactures at Washington seem delighted to pick out from the consular reports so many of the utopian and optimistic statements furnished up by special pleading in regard to the operation of street railways in Europe by public officials. Report No. 3276 of Sept. 11 last contained no less than three reports from England on street railway operation, besides a general article on the management of public utilities in Germany. To the uninformed reader it might appear from the reading of these reports that they showed a certain degree of success on the part of the municipal officials who do their own bookkeeping and draw their own modest deductions as to what they have accomplished. The slightest analysis, however, puts all these cases of municipal operation in the list of financial or economic failures, and there ought to be some one in the department of state or the bureau of manufactures who would either take out the partisan color in these documents or insist that the consuls should reveal the truth.

Even with the best light put on these reports it is naively admitted that the Belfast system had broken down because of the unfortunate limitations imposed by the act of parliament in which the city was empowered to purchase and operate the system—that it should be self supporting and that no money should be taken from railway purposes from any other fund. The receipts did not meet expenses, and it became necessary to raise fares all along the line. The companies in Huddersfield and Manchester made a somewhat better showing upon the face of the figures, but examination showed that their financial success was due to rates of wages which would not be tolerated in this country. In Huddersfield it is stated that "the 430 regular employees receive a weekly wage of $2.25." This would work out at $5.20 per week per employee. This would amount to $270.40 per capita per year and would require an expenditure of $116,328. In the United States as far back as the census report of 1902 16,338 motormen in cities of 500,000 and over received total wages of $10,509,456. This works out at $64 per man, or about 240 per cent of the average wages paid all employees in Huddersfield. If the scientific soundness of dividing the average number of employees by the amount paid is called in question we have the assurance of the census report that the median rate for all motormen in the United States was $2 to $2.04 per day. The significant fact, from a financial point of view, is that if wages in Huddersfield had been raised to the average wages of large cities in this country the surplus of $200,200 above operating cost would have been more than half wiped out and the demands for interest, redemption of debt and depreciation accounts could not have been met. Even as it was, with wages ground down to the starvation minimum, there was a surplus after charges and allowances of $31,700, which, with the irony, is applied under the English system "to the relief of the general rates." Evidently the motormen who are receiving the princely wages of 75 cents per day are doing their share toward the "relief of the general rates," but may get a part of the money back if they become charges on the city.

If the advocate of municipal operation takes refuge behind the claim that conditions are different in England from those in this country, the claim may be freely admitted. But in making such a claim he abandons his case. The sole object in presenting alluring pictures of low fares and apparent surplus earnings on the English lines is to convince the American public that similar results could be obtained here. If the comparison contains no such suggestion, then it has no practical bearing on the effort to secure municipal operation in this country and is of the same academic interest as an essay on convulsion routes in Mesopotamia in the time of Belshazzar. It is quite true that conditions in England differ radically from those in this country and that many of the features of English municipal operation would not be tolerated for the moment by the American public. The fares graded according to distance make short rides cheap, but long ones dear. They tend to congest the population in the tenement districts, while our system of a uniform fare tends to development of suburban property and the distribution of the working masses where they can find air and sunlight.

Even in such a matter as claims for injuries the Huddersfield traction system protects itself behind an insurance company and leaves the company to fight the claims as resolutely as its interest naturally demands. Municipal operation far from having proved a success abroad, and if it had attained success abroad this would be far from proving the possibility of its success in the United States. To obtain a nominal surplus by keeping wages of operatives down to 75 cents per day will hardly appeal to any part of the American public.—Commercial and Financial Chronicle.

A Dressmaker's Lawyer.

"I make styles in ladies' dress a study," said a lawyer. "It's part of my business. I try cases for these dressmakers who get fooled out of their money. I won a case once just by knowing how to drape a skirt. The rich woman had failed to pay because she said the dressmaker didn't make the dress to fit her. The skirt was wrong. They made her get up in court and try the dress on. I got up with her. I helped her put it on, draped it deftly, pinned it here and there, and presto, a corking fit! The dressmaker was in a case. Even the judge expressed admiration for my knowledge of dressmaking. It was so unusual in a lawyer, he said."

"There was another case I won by knowing the styles. A woman lost some dresses in a fire. One had been rescued partly burned. She demanded an enormous sum from the insurance company for the dress. This one she brought to court. It was a handsome dress, but it was about three years behind the times in style, and I proved it."

"Instead of paying her $300 for the loss of it the company paid her about $25."—Chicago Item.

The Animals Have Sympathy.

Immediately in front of my house is a small paddock, in which there have been feeding a pony and four cows. In a tiny clump of grass and buttercups there is a willow wren's nest filled with young, says a writer in Country Life. Though all the grass around it is closely cropped, this little clump remains absolutely untouched. Am I wrong in believing that birds have been system of communicating their whereabouts and that the larger animals show consideration and care for the weak and helpless we too often despise and set at naught?

She stopped suddenly at the look on his face of mortal pain. It pierced through the fierce resentment to her deepest heart, and all her love and pity rushed back upon her in a torrent. She threw herself on her knees by the bare cot, crying passionately:

"Oh, forgive me! Forgive what I said! I did not mean it. I have forgiven you a thousand times over. I never ceased to love you. I love you more now than all the world."

"It is true," he said, hoarse misery in his tone. "I have wronged you. If I could coin my blood drop by drop to pay for the past I could not set that right. If giving my life over and over again would save you pain I would give it gladly. But what you ask now is one thing I cannot do. It would make me a pitiful coward. I did not kill Moreau. That is all I can say to you or to those who try me."

"Your life?" she said with dry lips. "It will mean that. That costs so fearfully much to me, more than my own life a hundred times. Yet there is something that counts more than all that to you."

His face was that of a man who holds his hand in the fire. "Jessica," he said, "it is like this with me. When you found me here—the day I saw you on the balcony—I was a man whose soul had lost its compass and its bearings. My conscience was asleep. You woke it, and it is fiercely alive now. And now with my memory has come back a debt of my past that I never paid. Whatever the outcome, for my soul's sake I must settle it now and wipe it from the score forever."

She rose slowly to her feet, with a despairing gesture.

"He saved others," she quoted in a hard voice, "himself he could not save." I once heard him preach from that text at home. It was your friend, the Rev. Henry Sanderson. I thought it was a spiritual sermon then. That was the first I knew what his companionship had been to you."

"If there were any justice in the universe," she added, "it should be he immolating himself now, not you. But for him you would never be here. He ruined your life and mine, and I hate and despise him for a selfish hypocrite."

That was what he himself had seemed to her in those old days. The edge of a flush touched his forehead as he said slowly, almost appealingly:

"He was not a hypocrite, Jessica. Whatever he was it was not that. At college he did what he did too openly. That was his failing, not caring what others thought. He despised weakness in others. He thought it none of his affair. So others were influenced. But after he came to see things differently from another standpoint—when he went into the ministry—he would have given the world to undo it."

"Men's likings are strange," she said. "Because he never had temptations like yours and has never done what the law calls wrong you think he is as noble as you—noble enough to shield a murderer in his own danger."

"Ah, no, Jessica?" he interrupted gently. "I only said that in my place he would do the same."

"But you are shielding a murderer," she insisted fiercely. "You are not admitting it, but I know. There can be no justice or right in that. If Harry Sanderson is all you think him, if he stood here now and knew the whole story, he would say it was wicked—not brave and noble, but wicked and cruel."

He shook his head, and the sad shadow of a bitter smile touched his lips. "He would say no," he said.

A dry sob answered him on the narrow shadow side, his elbows aching, but powerless to comfort. He heard her step. The door closed sharply. Then he faced into the empty cell.

"It should be he immolating himself now, not you."

arms, with a hopeless cry: "Jessica, Jessica!"

Jessica left the jail with despair in her heart. The hope on which she had fed these past days had failed her. What was there left for her to do? Like a swift wind, she went up the street to the unlighted stair and tapped on the door. There was no answer. She pushed it open and entered the empty outer room, where a study lamp burned on the desk.

A pile of legal looking papers had been set beside it, and with them lay a torn page of a newspaper whose familiar caption gave her a stab of pain. Perhaps the news of the trial had found its way across the ranges to where the names of Stires and Moreau had been known. Perhaps every one at Anston already knew of it, was reading about it, pitying her. She picked it up and scanned it hastily. There was no hint of the trial, but her eyes caught the news which had played its role in the courtroom, and she read it to the end.

Even in her own trouble she read it with a shiver. Yet, awful as the fate which Harry Sanderson had so narrowly missed, it was not to be compared with that which awaited Hugh. For, awful as it was, it held no shame. In a gust of feeling she slipped to her knees by the one sofa the room contained and prayed passionately. As she drew out her handkerchief to stanch the tears that came something fell with a musical tinkle at her feet. It was the little cross she had found in front of the hillside cabin that had lain forgotten in her pocket during those past anxious days. As she pressed it the ring at the top gave way, and the cross perched the date that had come into Hugh's life with such a sinister meaning was a glad anniversary.

Suddenly she caught her hand to her cheek. A world idea had rushed through her brain. The religious symbol had stood for Harry Sanderson, and the chance coincidence of date had irresistibly pointed to the murder. To her excited senses the juxtaposition held a bizarre, uncanny suggestion. This cross, the very emblem of vicarious sacrifice! Suppose Harry Sanderson had never given it to Hugh! Suppose he had lost it on the hillside himself!

She snatched up the paper again. "Who has been for some months on a prolonged vacation"—the phrase started sardonically at her. That might carry far back—she said it under her breath, fearfully—beyond the murder of Dr. Moreau. Her face burned, and her breath came sharp and fast. Why when she brought her warning to the cabin had Hugh been so anxious to get her away unless to prevent her sight of the man who was there, to whom he had taken her horse? Who was there in Smoky Mountain whom he would protect at hazard of his life?

Jessica's veins were all aflame. A reactor murderer? A double career? Was it beyond possibility? It came to her like an inspiring ray of light, the old curious likeness that had sometimes been made a jest of at the white house in the aspens. Moreau and Prendergast had moved it to be Hugh. So had the town, for the body had been found on his ground. But on the night when the real murderer came again to the cabin perhaps it was his coat that had brought back the old memory. Hugh had known the truth. In the light of this supposition, his strained manner then, his present determination not to speak, all stood plain.

What had he meant by a debt of his past that he had never paid? He could have no debt to Harry Sanderson. If he owed any debt it was to his dead father, a thousand times more than the draft he had repaid. Could he be thinking in his remorse of the debt he had cast him off, counting himself nothing, remembering only that Harry Sanderson had been David Stires' favorite and St. James' minister? He enriched by the odium of its rector, the apple of his eye?

Jessica had snatched at a straw. He

BUSYBODIES V.S. TRUTH.

Here Are The Facts—Judge For Yourself.

Bodybodies who see in success only fastidiously, who, without making an effort to inform themselves, blantly cry offense against honesty and truth—soon to forget that a star against Dr. Pierce's well-known non-alcoholic family remedies is a star against the intelligence of thousands of men who have been helped and cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is not a "patent medicine" in any sense; it is simply the favorite remedy which Dr. Pierce has used in an extended practice for the treatment of the diseases peculiar to women.

Truth and Influence. A name for honesty and square dealing is better than great riches. Fraud is a bubble that soon bursts. Dr. R. V. Pierce has always been known to speak the truth—what his famous medicines were founded on the rock of public approval and have thousands of truthful testimonials as to their ability to cure diseases for which they are recommended.

True Speaking. No man ever lost a prospective customer through telling the truth. In the long run Dr. Pierce believes the truth will prevail and he is not afraid to make public his formula.

Valuable Trade Secrets. The ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription are of excellent and harmless character of his "Prescription" by telling all women know that what they are taking when they use this reliable tonic and nerve tonic is a medicine of purest quality.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not quite laxative, the little, pleasant, sugar-coated "Pillules" should be taken to aid the "Prescription." One or two for breakfast, two to four for a cathartic. They also have been known to cure many bad cases of stomach trouble, dyspepsia and indigestion. They act on the liver and regulate the bowels. Put up in glass vials, corked, therefore, always fresh and reliable.

No Alcohol Used. Dr. Pierce never believed it necessary or advisable to use alcohol in the preparation of either his "Favorite Prescription" or his "Golden Medical Discovery," the well-known alternative tonic, which is so largely used as a remedy for indigestion, torpid liver, bad blood and kindred ailments. Over forty years ago, he discovered that chemically pure glycerine is a far better solvent of the active principles residing in his native medicinal plants when used as a proper and sustained temperature than is alcohol; and, furthermore, he found that a glyceric extract kept much better than an alcoholic one, and that the glycerine possessed intrinsic remedial value, being demulcent, nutritive and an effective and-ferment. Although costing somewhat more, Dr. Pierce predicts that glyceric medicinal extracts will, in the not distant future, largely replace alcoholic ones so generally prescribed by physicians and put out by proprietary or "patent medicine" manufacturers, as being more efficient and entirely free from the serious objection of making incase, where a somewhat restricted use of medicine is necessary no matter how good or well adapted to the case it may be in order to obtain permanent results.

cause it was the only bright thing in the dreary life. Now with a blind fatuousness she hugged it tighter to her bosom. One purpose possessed her—to confront Harry Sanderson. What matter though she missed the remainder of the trial? She could do nothing. Her hands were tied. If the truth lay at Aniston she would find it. She thought no farther than this. Once in Harry Sanderson's presence, what she should say or do she scarcely imagined. The horrifying question filled her thought to the exclusion of all that must follow its answer. It was surety and self conviction she craved, only to read in his eyes the truth about the murder of Moreau.

She suddenly began to tremble. Would the doctor let her know? What excuse could she give? If he was the man who had been in Hugh's cabin that night he had heard her speak, had known she was there. He must not know beforehand of her coming lest he have suspicion of her errand. Bishop Ludlow, he could gain her access to him. Injured, dying perhaps, maybe he did not guess that Hugh was in jeopardy for his crime. Guilty and dying, if he knew this, he would surely tell the truth. But if he died before she could reach him? The paper was some days old. He might be dead already. She took heart, however, from the statement of his improved condition.

She sprang to her feet and looked at her chateleine watch. The eastbound express was overdue. There was no time to lose. Minutes might count. She examined her purse. She had money enough with her.

Five minutes later she was at the station, a scribbled note was on its way to Mrs. Halloran, and before a swinging red lantern the long incoming train was shuddering to a stop.

Chapter 29

IN the long hospital the air was cool and filtered, drab figures passed with soft footfalls and voices were measured and hushed. But no sense of coolness or repose had come to the man whose racked body had been tenderly borne there in the snowy dawn which saw the blackened ruins of Aniston's most perfect edifice.

Hugh had sunk into unconsciousness with the awe struck exclamation ringing in his ears, "Good God, it's Harry Sanderson!" He had drifted back to conscious knowledge with the same words racing in his brain. They implied that so far as capture went the old, curious resemblance would stand his friend till he betrayed himself or till the existence of the real Harry Sanderson at Smoky Mountain did hold for him. The delusion must hold if he could have himself moved to some place where his secret would be safer, till he could get away.

This thought grew swiftly paramount; it overlapped the rigid agony of his burns that made the bed on which he lay a fiery furnace; it gave method to his every word and look. He took up the difficult part and, after the superficial anguish dulled, complained no more and successfully counterfeited cheerfulness and betterment. He said nothing of the curiously recurrent and sickening stab of pain, searching and deep seated, that took his breath and held him time in increasing godliness. Whatever inner hurt this might be, he must hide it the sooner he left the hospital, where each hour brought nearer the inevitable disclosure.

He thanked fortune now for the chapel game. Few enough in Aniston would care to see the unfrocked, disgraced rector of St. James'. He did not know that the secret was Bishop Ludlow's own until the hour when he opened his eyes after a fitful sleep upon the latter's face.

The bishop was the first visitor, and it was his first visit, for he had been in a distant city at the time of the fire. Waiting the waking, he had been mystified at the change a few months had wrought in the countenance of the man whose disappearance had cost him so many sleepless hours. The months of indigence and rich living—of the money he had won from Harry—and his fallen cheeks were now of the contour of Harry's own. But the bishop distinguished new lines in the face on the pillow, an expression unfamiliar and puzzling. The firmness and strength were gone, and in their place was a haunting something that gave him a chilling suggestion of the discarded that he could not shake off.

Waking, the unexpected sight of the bishop startled Hugh. To the good man's pain he had turned his face away.

"My dear boy," the bishop had said, "they tell me you are stronger and better. I thank God for it!"

He spoke gently and with deep feeling. How could he tell to what extent he himself, in mistaken charity, had been responsible for that unconscious look? When Hugh did not answer the bishop misconstrued the silence. He leaned over the bed. The big cool hand touched the fevered one on the white coverlet, where the ruby ring glowed, a coal in snow.

"Harry," he said, "you have suffered more than I think of. But kind of me only as your friend. I ask no questions. We are going to begin where we left off."

"I would like to do that," said Hugh.

"To begin again. But the chapel is gone."

"Never mind that," said the bishop cheerfully. "You are only to get well. We are going to rebuild soon, and we shall have a new chapel."

"We are going to begin where we left off," said the bishop. "I want your judgment on the plans. Aniston is hanging on your condition, Harry," he went on. "There's a small cartload of visiting cards downstairs for you. But I imagine you haven't begun to receive yet, eh?"

"I've seen nobody," Hugh spoke hurriedly and hoarsely. "Tell the doctor to let no one come—one not but you. I—I'm not up to it."

"Why, of course not," said the bishop quickly. "You need quiet, and the people can wait."

The bishop chatted awhile of the parish, Hugh replying only when he must, and went away heartened. Before he left Hugh saw his way to hasten his own going. On the next visit the seed was dropped in the bishop's mind so cleverly that he thought the idea his own. That day he said to the surgeon in charge:

"He is gaining so rapidly I have been wondering if he couldn't be taken away where the climate will benefit him. Will he be able to travel soon?"

"I think so," answered the surgeon. "We suspected internal injury at first, but I imagine the worst he has to fear is the disfigurement. Mountain or sea air would do him good," he added reflectively. "What he will need is tonic and building up."

The bishop had resolved this in his mind. He knew a place on the coast, tucked away in the cypresses, which would be admirable for convalescence. He could arrange a special car, and he himself could make the journey with him. He proposed this to the surgeon and with his approval put his plan in motion. In two days more Hugh found his going fully settled.

The idea admirably fitted his necessity. The spot the bishop had selected was quiet and retired and, more, was near the port at which he could most readily take ship for South America. Only one reflection made him shiver—the route lay through the town of Smoky Mountain. Yet who would dream of looking for a fugitive from the law in the secluded car that carried a sick man? The risk would be small enough, and it was the one way open.

On the last afternoon before the departure Hugh asked for the clothes he had worn when he was brought to the hospital, found the gold pieces he had snatched in the burning chapel and tied them in a handkerchief about his neck. They would suffice to buy his sea passage. The one red coat he had kept—it was from henceforth to be a reminder of the good resolutions he had made so long ago—he slipped into a pocket of the clothes he was to wear away, a suit of loose, comfortable tweed.

Waiting restlessly for the hour of his going, Hugh asked for the newspapers. Since the first he had had them read to him each day, listening fearfully for the hue and cry. But today the surgeon put his request aside.

"After you are there," he said, "if Bishop Ludlow will let you. Not now. You are almost out of my clutches, and I must tuck away while I can."

A quick look passed from him to his assistant as he spoke, for the newspapers that afternoon had worn startling headlines. The world affairs of a running town across the ranges had little interest for Aniston, but the names of Stines and Moreau on the clicking wire had waked it thus late to the sensation. The professional caution of the thinner of human bodies wished, however, that the excitement should be added to the unavoidable fatigue of his patient's departure.

This fatigue was near to spelling defeat, after all, for the exertion brought again the dreadful stabbing pain, and this time it carried Hugh into a region where feeling ceased, consciousness passed and from which he struggled back finally to find the surgeon bending anxiously over him.

"I don't like that sinking spell," the latter comforted to his assistant an hour later as they stood looking through the window after the receding carriage. "It was too pronounced. Yet he has complained of no pain. He will be in good hands at any rate." He tapped the glass minutely with his forefinger. "It's curious," he said after a pause. "It always liked Sanderson—in the pulpit. Somehow he doesn't appeal to me at close range."

The special car which the bishop had ready had been made a pleasant interior. Fern boxes were in the corners, a caged canary swung from a bracket, and a softly cushioned couch had been prepared for the sick man. A moment before the start, as it was being coupled to the rear of the resting train, while the bishop chatted with the conductor, a hustled messenger boy handed him a telegram. It read:

I arrive Aniston tomorrow & Confidential. Must see you. Urgent. JESSICA.

HOPKINSVILLE

The Place For New Enterprises.

No city within a large scope of territory offers such advantages for manufacturing industries as Hopkinsville. Wise management and adequate capital are all that is required.

As an illustration we notice the Mogul Wagon Co. has just declared a three per cent. dividend on its preferred stock on its first six months' business. This indicates the decided geographical advantage the company enjoys over the large northern factories who are compelled to come to Kentucky and Tennessee for spokes, hubs, sideboards, axles, bolsters—in short for all the lumber that goes into a wagon, and then pay freight both ways on this material in order to compete with the Mogul Company in this and southern, western and eastern territory.

This immense advantage, amounting to a large proportion of a legitimate profit, is going to make of this Hopkinsville enterprise a big industry, fraught with great possibilities and importance to the future of our city. In addition to this the enterprise appeals to our people as a home industry, which will work up our native resources in the way of timber and bring in return from distant markets the dear dollars of our daddies.

The success of this, the latest and biggest of our new industries, is gratifying indeed to our citizens, and will result in the establishment of more manufacturing for our growing city. Come on with your projects, gentlemen, Hopkinsville will do her part.

I. C. PAYS $200,000

For Line Running Into Providence.

Irving H. Wheatcroft, president of the Kentucky Valley Railroad Company, returned from British Columbia a few days ago and while in the city on Saturday, Oct. 31st, transferred the Kentucky Valley railroad to the Illinois Central railroad company, says the Providence enterprise. Negotiations for the sale of the road have been pending for some time, and the sale was finally made by Mr. Wheatcroft a few days ago. The price secured for this valuable piece of property is of course a secret, but it is currently rumored that the consideration was approximately $200,000.

AMUSEMENTS.

W. F. Mann presents a dramatization of Mary J. Holmes' well known and popular novel, "Tempest and Sunshine," by Lem B. Parker. The play has as its foundation the contrasts of character in the two sisters, out of which grow naturally and inevitably the episodes and entanglements which combine to make the plot. Dr. Lacey is, by virtue of his relation with them both so involved in their interests as to become the central figure of the story. "Tempest's" rather passionate nature leads her into mistakes which bring her the most serious consequences, though she is by no means the sort of woman whose conduct can be made the subject of reprobation. The villain of the play is personated by the village postmaster, Joseph Dunn, at first a mysterious individual, but who afterwards turns out to be rather a common kind of criminal.

The play is entertaining, and well told, pure, sweet, and an idyll of loyalty of love thrilled through and through with the tender grace of a day that is dead.

All who desire to see a first class production, presented in a first class manner, should not fail to see "Tempest and Sunshine" on Nov. 11, at Holland's Opera House.

MUSICAL COMEDY COMPANY.

Robert Athon, manager of Zinn's Musical Comedy Company, that clever organization that soon appears in our city, is one of the most widely known theatrical managers on the road, and scarcely a town Mr. Athon gets in, that he does not know some one. Although only a young man, he has been in the theatrical business all his life, and it was because of his well known business ability, that Mr. Zinn engaged his services to pilot the Zinn show over the country. The company numbers thirty people, and has among its members such well known stars as Tony West, late of Weber & Fields New York company; Jake Clifford, late comedian of "The Girl Question," and Sam Hyams, who the past three seasons sang all the tenor roles with Aborn Opera Co. Andy Buzdenez is probably one of the best character men in the musical comedy business. Robert Athon, in addition to managing the show, is also a comedian of national reputation, having held the position as comedian at Keith & Proctors, Fifth Ave., N.Y., for three seasons. When this clever trio of funmakers get started, it is claimed they would make a mule laugh. They will be here with the Zinn show Nov. 19, 20 and 21.

WARNING NOTICES

By Night Riders Cause Negroes to Flee.

Glasgow, Ky., Nov. 7.—Night rider tactics are being indulged in in Monroe county. Yesterday a crew of negroes operating the stove mills of Chess-Wyndon & Co., at McFarland, near the Tennessee line, were notified by posters tacked up about the mill premises to abandon the mill at once, and that upon their failure to do so they would be dealt with in night rider style. As soon as notified, every negro in connection with the mill fled to Tennessee.

SHOT IN ARM

In a Struggle Over Possession of a Pistol.

At Mrs. Adcox's boarding house on Central avenue, Friday night, Harvey Youngs, a blacksmith, drew a pistol and a railroad man who was present engaged in a scuffle with Youngs, attempting to wrest the pistol from him, and in the struggle the weapon was discharged, wounding Youngs in the right arm. His arm was also broken or badly sprained. His injuries are painful, but not dangerous.

DRY STREAM.

Suddenly Rises without Rain and Begins Running.

Gracey, Ky., Nov. 9.—Rev. R. W. Morehead, of Princeton, preached at the West Union Baptist church, Sunday.

J. P. Meacham has been quite ill for several days, but is improving. Miss Mary Nance, of Pee Dee, is visiting her sister here.

Mrs. E. T. Libby and little son, of Evansville, are visiting friends here.

The "School Improvement League" gave a "box party" at the new school house Friday night, which was a great success in point of attendance and in the amount netted—$32. The school building is one of the handsomest in the county and the money raised will be used to improve the interior. Misses Lurline Wadlington and Lizzie Nance are the teachers.

The dust is becoming terrific and even the air seems hazy with it.

A curious circumstance is noted in regard to the stream near here known as Meacham's branch. It rises in the farm known as the Lander farm, flows through two or three farms and sinks near the Calis road. During the drouth it has been almost dry for the first time in many years. It had ceased to flow and only occasional pools were left. A few days ago the "big spring" started to running, the stream rose perceptibly and has since been flowing, although there has not been a drop of rain here for weeks.
